ADAMS TAX RATE GOES UP 2 1-2 MILLS FOR 1934

Decrease In Real Estate Values Causes Larger Levy In County.

SINKING FUND REMAINS SAME

As predicted last Friday, the Adams county commissioners boosted the county tax rate for 1934 two and a half mills at their regular weekly meeting this morning.

The one-half mill sinking fund tax was left unchanged.

The increase in the county tax rate raises the total levy from seven to nine and one-half mills for 1934.

Tax Yields $167,000

This year's county tax rate yielded the county approximately $167,000 in revenue for operating expenses of the county administration.

Although the county tax rate was increased two and a half mills for next year, the commissioners discovered that the yield, on the basis of the 1934 real estate assessments, will be only $150,720.76 for operating expenses, as compared with $167,000 this year.

This seemingly paradoxical fact results from the drop of $1,452,913 in real estate assessments for Adams county as made this fall by the assessors. The decrease in real estate assessments, particularly on farms and orchards, was the prime factor in the commissioners' decision to increase the tax rate.

Transfer Causes Increase

Other factors responsible for the increase in the county tax rate were the transfer of the four-mill money-at-interest tax from the county to the state and the $40,000 in outstanding taxes due the county for 1933.

With estimated taxes for 1934 cut from $167,000 to $150,000, the commisioners announced that their budget for the coming year must necessarily be decreased, and slashes in annual appropriations all along the line are expected.

While the general county tax for 1934 is expected to yield $150,720.76, the half-mill sinking fund levy will yield the county $8,376.78. This money is used to pay interest on outstanding bonds and loans and to provide for the retirement of such obligations.

Legion Members Charge Unfair Distribution of CWA Positions

Local Post Says Administrators Do Not Give Preference To Ex-Service Men As Program Provides; McConaghie, Van Cleve Issue Statements.

Charges that ex-service men are not being given preference for jobs under the civil works' administration in Adams county were made by members of the Albert J. Lentz American Legion post, 202, at a regular meeting at the post home Baltimore street, Monday evening.

The legionaires named William VanCleve, manager of the federal re-employment office here, and James R. McConagahie, Adams county civil works' administrator, as the men responsible for keeping ex-service men from jobs.

Claim Few Ex-Service Men Working

The post was informed that when the civil works' administration came into being, federal officials specifically pointed out the preference for positions be given ex-service men.

Legionaires said that when work was started on the civilian conservation corps camps on the battlefield, a number of ex-service men made application for positions. Afterwards they said other men were hired instead for the positions.

At present the legionaires said, only [illegible] ex-service men are working at the CCC camp.

Committee Files Complaint

A committee of legionaires is said to [illegible] and filed a complaint. They contended that this preference was given to ex-service men, an investigation would be forthcoming.

Legionaires reported at the meeting Monday evening that Mr. VanCleve, manager of the local re-employment office, has not been giving preference to former service men. They said a number of ex-service men were among the first to register at Mr. VanCleve's office but have never been called. Others, the legion men said, have registered twice, and are still unemployed.

Say They're Willing Workers

The legionaires said a number of ex-service men would have been willing to take any kind of a job, whether with pick and shovel or

KILL OF DEER LESS THAN '32

About 1,200 Hunters In Mountains For 1933 Season, Bushman Says.

Approximately 90 legal deer were killed in Adams county during the big game season which closed December 15, Leo Bushman, Adams county game protector, announced today.

Although less than half the number of psortsmen in the mountains last year hunted during the deer season this year, the kill was only about 25 per cent less than 1932.

Last year, Mr. Bushman estimated there were 2,500 sportsmen in the South mountains during the deer season. This season he estimated the big game season attracted only between 1,000 and 1,200 hunters to the mountains.

Mr. Bushman said he has records of seven illegal deer being killed in Adams county this year, and in company with F. A. Myers, Shippensburg, district game protector, the county protector was conducting investigations today in an effort to round up the hunters who killed illegal deer.

The bag of grouse and quail in the county was bigger this year than last, Mr. Bushman said, but fewer rabbits and squirrels were shot this year than last.

Nears His Goal

COL. CHARLES A. LINDBERGH

FLYING COUPLE NEAR CLOSE OF AERIAL SURVEY

Lindberghs Expect To Land At Long Island Or Newark Today.

TO BE AT HOME FOR CHRISTMAS

Charleston, S. C., Dec. 19 (AP)—Colonel and Mrs. Charles A. Lindbergh left Charleston at 8:41 a. m. today on the last leg of their flight to New York. They stopped here over night after flying here yesterday from Miami, Florida. The couple apparently intend to land at Newark or Long Island airports, as indicated last night, but gave no formal word of their plans.

Today's flight was expected to bring to a close an aerial survey journey which took them across two portions of the Atlantic ocean and carried them almost around the western hemisphere.

Less than five hours were expected to see them at the end of their five-month trip, to spend "Christmas with the baby"—the goal announced by Mrs. Lindbergh even before the couple headed westward across the Azores and the south Atlantic less than two weeks ago.

The return of the famous flying couple to New York completed the firs aerial circumnavigation of the North and South Atlantic oceans.

Colonel Lindbergh had announced as his speedy monoplane left New York 5 months ago, that the flight was to survey the possibilities of a trans-Atlantic airplane route by way of Greenland, but step by step the flight continued around the two oceans to make one of the major achievements of aviation history.

During the flight, Mrs. Lindbergh exhibited great skill in acting as radio operator, navigator and co-pilot. One of the great flights of the trip was the 1,900-mile spanning of the South Atlantic. As the plane roared over the ocean, never leaving its course, Mrs. Lindbergh sent out messages to land stations telling of the flight.

No Misfortunes or Delays

Unlike the trip to the Orient two summers ago, this flight was not marred by delays and misfortunes. Engine trouble had forced them down as they approached Japan on the flight to the Orient, then their plane overturned in China in the flood waters of the Yangtze river at Nanking and both suffered a ducking. They hastened back to America by steamship when they received word of the death of Senator Dwight W. Morrow, Mrs. Lindbergh's father.

On the present trip, Colonel Lindbergh stopped off in Sweden to visit

National Park Officials Turn Down Plans for Creek, Sewage Projects

Council Must Look To Other Sources For Funds To Accomplish Work; Visitors Say Treatment Plant Is Not On Battlefield.

WORK MAY BE DONE UNDER PWA IF GETTYSBURG BORROWS THE MONEY

Officials of the National Park Service, who were in Gettysburg, Sunday, turned thumbs down on the tentative approval given for improvements to the sewage treatment plant and the cleaning and straightening of Rock creek from the sewage disposal plant to the Baltimore pike.

The sewage treatment plant project, which carried with it an appropriation of $15,000 for materials, was rejected by the national officials because the plant is not in the national park here.

The cleaning and straightening of Rock creek was rejected by the National Park Service officials because such improvements would destroy valuable historical significance of the stream.

As a result of the rejection of the sewage treatment plant improvement project, council will have to look elsewhere for funds for the work if it is to be carried ahead, according to plans drawn up by Remington, Vosbury & Goff, Camden, New Jersey, engineers.

Superintendent Gives Statement

At a special meeting of council last Friday, council voted to proceed with the work of improving the plant as soon as plans submitted to the national government were approved. Now such approval will be withheld.

James R. McConaghie, superintendent of the national park here, said the work may be done either under the public works administration, whereby the town borrows its money from the federal government or as a project under the civil works administration by which only labor for the work would be furnished up to February 15.

Mr. McConaghie issued the following statement today regarding the rejection of the two projects:

"When the civil works administration first began to function, requests were sent to the various federal departments to submit possible work projects in and adjacent to the areas under their jurisdiction. The office of National Parks, Buildings and Reservations accordingly directed their field executives to submit projects for consideration.

"The local park office complied with a report proposing the employment of 400 men on local projects in and adjacent to the park, although at the time both emergency conservation works and public works covered all possible labor work within the park boundary proper. It therefore became necessary to consider projects in areas adjacent to the park.

"This report was submitted and tentative approval given to practically all the projects submitted. The changing status of the civil works administration, however, create a condition whereby all funds for civil works were allocated to states, coming under the jurisdiction of individual state administrators. This, of course, changed the whole outlook on any federal projects undertaken outside the boundaries of the federal areas.

"These now became directly local projects for county consideration.

"Accordingly, it has become necessary for a federal department proposing work outside its own area to fully justify all expenditures and work proposed as a direct park undertaking.

"With this restriction, a record consideration had to be given to all projects previously submitted and tentatively approved.

"In view of this fact, a recent conference was held in Gettysburg between the technical force of the national park service and myself to consider all civil works' projects previously submitted.

"The result of this conference, which was held, Sunday, was that the majority of the projects first submitted were determined as being ineligible for federal undertaking.

"It was determined that they were logical county projects and should be so nconsidered, and that the national park service could not justify the expenditure of the federal civil works' allocation of funds and men

Breslin was thrown out of the car, falling on his head. He was rendered unconscious. A call was put in for the Gettysburg ambulance, and he was brought to the Warner hospital, where his condition today was reported to be good.

Damage to Breslin's car was estimated at $300.

Girl Passes Bar Exam At Nineteen

Memphis, Tenn. (AP) — The brightest girl of her high school class has passed the Tennessee bar examination at the age of 19.

Since the law requires that a lawyer must be 21 years old, Miss Lowell Harris will ask the county court to remove her disabilities as a minor so that she may receive a license to practice.

Elected the brightest girl at Southside high when she was graduated, Miss Harris previously was salutatorian of her grammar school graduating class.

At the age of 15 she led the field in a city typing contest.

The sight-seeing bus has arrived in India, the first line to be operated for the convenience of tourists being known as "The Ganges Valley Pullman Service."

PICKS TROJANS AS GRID KINGS

Southern California Selected As Football's Best; Michigan Ranked Second.

By ALAN GOULD

The ranking of the nation's leading college football teams for 1933, which can hardly be much affected by the outcome of the Rose Bowl game, nevertheless is difficult enough.

Professor Dickinson of Illinois has a figure system which only the matically gifted can dispute. The professor has a very elaborate method, in some respects quite fair enough, but we seem to detect a slight optical enlargement in his view of the nearby Big Ten.

The Big Ten probably is the "toughest league," as Clark Daniel Shaughnessy of Chicago described it, but we doubt if it is tough enough to take three of the first five places or even four of the first ten in a national ranking list. Nor has Michigan the margin over its nearby or distant rivals, on the record, that the professor's final figures would indicate.

Take Your Choice

The professor lists Michigan, Nebraska, Minnesota, Pittsburgh, Ohio State, Southern California, Princeton, Oregon, Army, Purdue and Stanford in that order.

If our slant means anything, here's how we think the first ten stacks up:

1. Southern California (lost one, tied one)
2. Michigan (tied one)
3. Princeton (unbeaten and untied)
4. Pittsburgh (lost one)
5. Nebraska (lost one)
6. Minnesota (tied four)
7. Stanford (lost one, tied one)
8. Army (lost one)
9. Columbia (lost one)
10. Oregon (lost one)

This or any other order of ranking is difficult to analyze because 1933 furnished the most frequent form reversals we have known in many years. Princeton alone of the major teams came through unscathed and the Tigers had close calls against three outfits they figured to lick easily—Washington & Lee, Navy and Dartmouth. Every other team listed in the first ten either had at least one off-day or ran into opposition it simply could not handle.

Finished Strong

Southern California's record looks the best to us for the reason the Trojans finished more impressively than any other outfit. The Trojans in their last three games against Notre Dame, Georgia and Oregon rolled up 76 points while yielding none.

Princeton, Pittsburgh, Nebraska and Columbia also finished in high gear. So did Stanford. Michigan was not as impressive in November as it was while walloping all opposition in the first half of the season. Ohio State lost only one game.

No team stood out in the south as prominently as have some Dixie aggregations of recent years. Duke faltered in the stretch and lost to Georgia Tech. Georgia skidded badly at the finish. Alabama was tied by Mississippi early and lost a two-point decision to Fordham but was undefeated in the south and perhaps the best of the lot. Tulane and Tennessee had good records. So did Biff Jones' Louisiana State team which was unbeaten, but tied by Centenary, Vanderbilt and Tulane.

Newest Cucumber Wins High Favor

Holdenville, Tex. (AP)—Once Texas' chief claim to fame in this section was the Longhorn steer. Now it's the longhorn cucumber.

Introduced into Hughes county a few years ago the new variety has become increasingly popular. A native of Texas, it is described as possessing unusually good flavor as well as great size.

One 23 inches long was displayed in Holdenville when the 1933 crop was marketed.

FORBIDDEN VALLEY

By William Byron Mowery

SYNOPSIS Curt Tennyson has slipped away from his camp in the Canadian wilds hurt and a little bewildered. He and his partner, Paul St. Clair, have picked up Sonya Volkov, saved her from certain death at the hands of the Klosohee Indians, and Curt has fallen in love with her. Now he finds she has sent a letter declaring her love to Igor Karakhan, millionaire crook whom Curt is trying to bring to justice. Unable to face Sonya's treachery Paul too paddles away from camp

Chapter 32

CURT DECIDES

Paul wondered if Curt would throw up this Karakhan case altogether What a stew Sonya had made of it! Except for her, they would already have closed in on the man. Not only had they wasted precious days, but their best hope had gone glimmering, the hope of shadowing LeNoir, for without a doubt he suspected them now and would never let them follow him to his chief.

Occasionally he glanced down toward the Iskitimwah mouth, but saw nothing of his partner A little before noon he could stand it no longer Dropping down lake, he landed and walked back into the pines.

Curt was sitting against a boulder, tracing meaningless patterns on the wolf-foot with a stick He was plunged into deep thought, motionless, a dead pipe in his teeth. His face was gray and haggard, his eyes had a hard light in them, and when he looked up and smiled, it was a bitterly cynical smile

But in spite of those ravages and of the many times when Paul had seen the steely self-control that lay deep-down in Curt, he was surprised that his partner could have taken so terrible a blow and then, within the face of a few hours, could have shaken it off and got himself in hand He no longer seemed confused and bewildered, as last night at the sentry rocks

Curt pointed with the stick "See that pair of black lilies there, nodding their heads together? The smaller one is Sonya Volkov, and the other is her Cossack. I'm going to pull Karakhan's head off in a minute. I'll do it as an agent of the law, and not out of any jealousy over her. Lord, no!—I couldn't be jealous of anything that he owns I'll take the blossom over and give it to her, and then, after we nail him, I'll tell her what I meant by it"

"'Nail him'? You're still going ahead with this hunt?"

"Why not? We started it, we'll go through with it And from now on there'll be no more pussyfooting or generosity to strangers I want to get through with this mess and get back down north to our Three Rivers country I've been thinking of the Nahanni Mountains. Prospecting in the Nahannis will be a good way for a fellow to forget"

He got up, put on his jacket, and plucked the taller of the two black lilies Over the other one he hesitated a moment. A shudder went through him as he took hold of it. But then with a savage gesture he jerked it up by the roots and flung it away, and brushed his hands

"How're you going to find him?" Paul queried. "LeNoir is suspicious of us. He won't ever let us shadow him now"

"We won't try to shadow LeNoir We've got an easier way of finding Karakhan Sonya Volkov has been hard luck to us so far, but we're going to turn her into good luck We'll use her It's only fair, she used us"

"'Use her'—?"

"Well, she's going to him, isn't she? What's to prevent you and me from following her? She'll be a dozen times easier to shadow than that bush-slinker. We'll use her as our bait She's a pretty bait When she goes to join him, we'll go along, and when she gets there, we'll be there too!"

* * *

After a day and night of hard traveling, LeNoir stood in Karakhan's cabin once again "Dis is your," he said, and with no other explanation he handed over Sonya's letter

"Mine?" Karakhan echoed, struck all in a heap "It's for me, you say?" His face turned ashy. "Who knows I'm here? Who in hell pumped that out of you?"

LeNoir trembled "Read heem," he urged "You understand, den"

His eyes went to the table behind Karakhan where lay his chief's heavy automatic He backed up a step, and his fingers closed over an iron-tipped ski staff leaning against the well. If this girl was no friend of his chief's but an enemy who was playing some infinitely clever game, Karakhan might shoot him in his tracks

Karakhan ripped the envelope and held the letter to the window where the gray dawn-light was filtering through In bewilderment he scanned the first few lines, then whipped over to the last page and glanced at the signature to see who his correspondent was

"Sonya Volkov!"

"Den you know her? She no lie to me?"

The question went past the Russian unheard—he had turned back to the first page and was reading the letter with an intentness that shut out everything except the words before him

"Even yet LeNoir could not tell whether his chief would burst out at him in a fury or would fill his pocket with money, as the girl had said he would. He watched anxiously

But then, little by little, he saw how his chief was taking it Karakhan's anger and astonishment passed swiftly and changed to disbelief, as though he simply could not credit his good fortune; and then came a leaping exultation which his habitual cold mask could not quite hide.

"Where is she, LeNoir?" The pages quivered in his unsteady hands "Why the devil didn't you bring her along with you, man?"

LeNoir drew a breath of immense relief and his jumpy nerves smoothed themselves out. The girl had spoken the truth!

"She down der at dat camp wit' de u'ders," he explained Thinking this a good chance to impress Karakhan with his caution, he added "How I know wedder she talkit straight or not? I don't know she aw-right, until you say Me, I don' tell nobody w ere you hide, and I don' breeng no strangers here"

"But you should—No, I suppose you did do right, since you didn't know the—uh, circumstances Sit down I'll get some coffee for us."

As LeNoir eased onto the wall bench his glance strayed out the window to the landwash where half a dozen lean honey-colored huskies were nosing along the water edge for dead fish. A pistol shot east of the hangar fourteen birchbark canoes lay side by side on the sand like basking seals; and in the timber just back of them smoke was rising from three big campfires The party was the Black Grizzly and his men, on their way south.

They had come a hundred miles without stopping even for food, and another hundred lay ahead of them.

The sight of them comforted LeNoir a lot, after his two dismal failures to wipe out Ralston's party He certainly could use thirty more men on the job One swoop and smash, and the business would be done.

The Russian came out of the boarded-off kitchen with a pot of coffee He poured two tins and laced them with brandy. LeNoir drained his cup at a gulp. Slowly sipping his, Karakhan listened while LeNoir told him of the happenings down river

About the two suspicious strangers who were drawing closer and closer to his hiding, the Russian asked no questions just then. He was unable to focus his thoughts on that pair—the sentences of Sonya Volkov's letter were galloping too madly through his mind, and his emotions were too much in a turmoil over her She was near him, within a hundred miles! In five or six days more she would be there with him!

LeNoir suggested carefully, "She tell me dat you be veree 'blige' for be breeng you dis letter and you pay me some-ting, mebbe" He thought it good policy to mention the money matter while his chief was still in the first flush of elation and more likely to be generous "W'en I go on dat weelow islan' I take beeg chance on walk into trap; and den make his long treep fas'er'n hell."

Karakhan took out a billfold, selected a yellow note and passed it over LeNoir blinked his eyes as he saw the denomination—two 0's trailing a 5 His chief had always paid him very handsomely, but half a thousand dollars, for one trip—the girl's letter must have hit Karakhan hard!

"There'll be others like that," his chief assured, "when you bring her here to me Several others You'd better get some sleep now Siam-Klale's outfit got in just a little while ago and they won't be ready to start on till nearly noon" (Copyright, 1933, William B Mowery)

Karakhan, tomorrow, makes some significant preparations.

Christina The Xmas Doll

SYNOPSIS Ice and snow fairies rescue Christina, a doll, from the castle of the One-Legged Giant They start off back to Santa's Toyshop, but danger lies ahead of them

CHAPTER VIII

CHRISTINA IS BEWITCHED

Christina and the snow men and the ice fairies didn't get back to Toyland right away They had to travel so far that finally Christina's little friends had to sit on the snow to rest their wings

"Poor tired ones," said Christina "Here, I'll make you cushions," and she rolled up tiny snow balls behind their backs so they could rest.

Then she stepped into the middle of their circle and exclaimed "Oh, I'm so happy I'm going to dance"

It was such an odd scene that the stars in the sky came rushing overhead to watch. They threw a bright light on the little red figure of the doll twirling and spinning on the snow Soon the fairies were all humming and everyone was happy.

But there was danger near by. Out from behind a big pine tree crept a white fox with a long tail and blazing red eyes. Suddenly he stood right over the fairies' circle and barked at Christina:

"You must come back to my kingdom with me."

The poor little doll! The Queen of Fairies had meant to be kind to her She had said every one would love Christina But there was a white fox wanting her And no little doll likes to live among foxes.

"Go away, go away," said Christina, stamping her little foot on the snow. "I won't go with you."

Like a flash the fox was gone and there stood the proudest looking little queen with jewels all over her dress and a gold crown on her head

"I suppose I frightened you,' she said 'That was only a disguise I have a fine kingdom beyond the North Pole You must come with me. That's a silly red dress you have I'll give you silks and satins"

"No, no!' said Christina 'That's a pretty red dress Mrs Santa made it I don't want any other."

The Queen frowned In fact, she looked very angry

"Mrs Santa, indeed!' she said "Very well let me give you this little gold bracelet'

She slipped a little gold band around Christina's wrist But as she did it the doll disappeared

'Help, help," cried the fairies "where is Christina?"

"Why, here I am,' said Christina's voice

"But we can't see you" said the fairies

"You never will again," said the queen "The bracelet made her invisible, and only one person knows how to take it off"

War Blast Cases May Be Reopened

Washington, Dec 19 (AP)—Justice Owen J Roberts of the supreme court, umpire of the German-American mixed claims commission, handed down a decision upholding the propriety of reopening the famous Black Tom and Kingsland explosion cases that have been in controversy since World war days A decision as to whether the cases will actually be reopened now rests with the mixed claims commission itself

The Black Tom case arose from the destruction of a terminal of the Lehigh Valley roailroad in New York harbor, while the other involved the tremendous explosion that wiped out the Kingsland, New Jersey, munitions plant Both explosions happened just before the United States entered the World war

Shot through both cases were reams of testimony that German agents were responsible for both explosions and counter-testimony that the men named were in other parts of the country at the time Three years ago the mixed claims commission decided in favor of Germany on claims against that country totaling more than $40,000,000 Since then the claims have been reopened on the pleas of American attorneys and later closed again

STATE PASSES 2 BONUS BILLS

Five Public Service Commissioners Remain To Be Confirmed By Legislature.

Harrisburg Dec 19 (AP)—Administration plans to force some action on confirmation of five public service commissioners were withheld again today Senator Harris, Allegheny who planned to ask discharge of committees holding the nominations sent in by Governor Pinchot some months ago, has not decided on a course

Only two legislative days remain before the scheduled adjournment in which to confirm the commissioners

Political observers did not foresee an immediate special session of the senate on the subject of executive nominations but rumors were heard that the governor may call a session soon after the first of the year

The senate put up through the governor a bill destined to aid financially distressed school districts It concurred in House amendments to the Scott bill to provide for a five million dollar loan from the motor license fund to give immediate relief

The house meanwhile unanimously passed two bills to enable payment of five million dollars in bonuses to Pennsylvania soldiers Both measures sponsored by Representative Moyers, Philadelphia, were passed previously by both houses but were recalled from the governor at the retquest of Attorney General Schnader, who thought changes should be made to strengthen them As altered the bill set forth that in case a veteran has died his bonus shall be paid to his estate of beneficiary

'white collar," but added that they should have been given preference for the better jobs

The legionaires charged that Mr McConaghie, after filling the better-paying positions at the civilian conservation corps camps, approached the legion with a request for 27 laborers

The legion decided to send another committee to Washington in an effort to secure for then fellow-ex-servicemen more consideration in the matter of jobs in Adams county Clarence Bumbaugh was named chairman of the committee

McConaghie Answers Charges

Answering the legion's charges today Mr McConaghie said it was always his intention to give ex-service men preference for positions at the C C C camps, but that a number of those whom he interviewed were not qualified for the type of work

I called the legion's committee into my office ' the CWA administrator said and offered to place ex-service men at work at the C C C camps

'When the second C C C force was selected it was necessary for me to secure political endorsement for appointees. This of course did not prevent legionaires from securing positions

Mr VanCleve said his office has always made it a specialty to give preference to ex-service men 'In some instances however ex-service men have not registered for the particular kind of work for which we have had calls for men and of course other men were put to work it has always been the aim and intention of the re-employment office to give preference to ex-service men That was our original order

Post To Distribute Baskets

All ex-service men in Adams county are being urged to register at the legion home, giving an outline of the various types of work they are qualified to do

Fifty legionaires attended the meeting at which Arthur Warman commander presided

The legion decided to distribute its Christmas baskets among needy ex-service men and their families in Gettysburg and Adams county on Friday Thirty baskets will be distributed

Middletown Schnitz On Inaugural Dinner Menu

Mayor-Elect McNair Will Also Have Knepps For Home Folks Who Come To See Him Inaugurated In Pittsburg — He Gets Some Prize Recipes.

By GEORGE SIERER

Pittsburgh, Dec. 19 (AP).—A battle to the last dumpling is being cooked up in Pittsburgh, with that famed "cooker-up" Mayor-elect William N. McNair, lighting the fires under what s going to be a steaming kettle-ful of schnitz und knepp.

McNair is a graduate of Gettysburg college.

It all came about some time ago when McNair lamented the fact that one never finds that famous Pennsylvania Dutch dish in Pittsburgh.

Immediately he was deluged with schnitz and knepp recipes from Pittsburgh housewives who might be termed "expatriates" from the Pennsylvania German regions farther east

So the democratic mayor-to-be decided to have a contest, with several Pittsburgh women preparing schnitz and knepp to be served at a luncheon in honor of McNair's Middletown friends who are coming out here January 1 to see him inaugurated

Then he's going to let the folks from Middletown, his old home town, decide which schnitz and knepp tastes most like the schnitz und knepp that mother used to make back in Dauphin and Lancaster and Lebanon and Berks counties

It's been a long time since McNair himself has had any of that delectable, if somewhat filling dish, but he remembers is as a savory concoction.

Schnitz are dried, sweet apples 'They ought to come from Middletown" said McNair, and knepp (or knepps) are dumplings Taken separately they don't sound very enticing says the mayor-to-be, but cooked with ham! Ah! There's a culinary delight for you!

John B Watson, a mill and mine supply man, who also comes from down Middletown way, is going to give the luncheon and he wanted to put it on at the swanky Duquesne club, but McNair says no It's too "toney" for a good plain substantial dish like schnitz und knepp, asserts the man who's going to make Pittsburgh schnitz und knepp conscious

for the undertaking of these projects

Their reasoning, briefly, on two of the projects uppermost in the minds of Gettysburgians was as follows

'The disposal plant A project entirely without the park boundaries and distinctly a problem for the local municipality, in that thme national park itself contributed but a very minor portion to the existing condition of the sewage treatment plant There seemed to be nothing that could be arvanced which would justify the expenditure of federal CWA funds on the project It was with regret that such a decision was necessary in that it would quite likely create local dishatisfaction and a criticism of the national park service However, no other decision was logical when all conditions were considered

'The national park officials did agree that should the project be accepted as a county or state project and should the local quota of men allowed not prove sufficient to do the work, that the needed men would be released from the federal allocation together with the necessary funds to meet labor costs

"In other works the National Park Service is interested and wants to do everything in its power to promote the project, so accordingly it makes assurance of the necessary labor provided the project is approved by the state civil works administration

'Rock creek cleaning The National parks contention is that the conditions in Rock creek are created by the insufficient treatment system and that once this plant is made adequate the creation of a bettered condition in Rock Creek will immediately follow

"Furthermore, that modern engineering practice in the matter of flood control calls not for the opening of stream channels but rather to hinder the stream flow even to the extent of creating obstructions the idea being that a series of small floods would prevent the danger of a major flood

"Accordingly, a major cleaning and clearing operation in Rock creek would be contrary to accepted practice Again, there is no question but that the present course of the stream has a distinct historical significance It is known that the confederate troops charged across this stream in the attack on the union lines near Spangler's spring and in all probability used the banks and turns of the stream for protection Accordingly, any material change in the course of the stream would destroy its valuable historical significance Thus it happens that at least two of the major projects submitted have had to be rejected It is hoped that a thinking public will understand the logic which forced the rejection"

SEVER FINGERS TO EVADE WORK

Convicts In Texas Prison Maim Selves To Escape Hard Work.

Houston, Tex, Dec 19 (AP)—A bizarre account of how two convicts chopped off their fingers and a third cut off his arm to escape hard labor comes from the remote Retreve farm of the state prison system Officials of the farm expressed the opinion that the men maimed themselves in order to get transferred to the central penitentiary at Huntsville where the work is lighter

Julius Joch, twenty-six years old of Houston, said he chopped off three fingers of his left hand with a cane knife so he could "make the Huntsville walls Harry Bertolme thirty-five, of Fort Worth, hacked off his arm above the wrist on December 9. Captain B. H Tarver, assistant manager of the farm, said Bertolme explained he did not want to work Melvin Underwood, twenty, of Wellington, convicted of the murder of Amis Marchbanks, said his four fingers were chopped off accidentally by a fellow convict while they were digging stumps

Underwood said he twice had been made to "stand on the barrel" as punishment for infraction of prison farm work rules Captain Ike Kelley farm manager, explained that convicts who violated rules were required to stand on an upturned barrel after work hours as punishment The men, he said stand on the barrel for two hours, then rest one hour then stand on the barrel again until midnight

"In my honest opinion" Captain Tarver said, "Underwood had the other convict chop off his fingers so he could get to Huntsville where the work is not so hard"

This is not a new thing on the prison farm," Kelley said "Last fall we had an epidemic of about four or five convicts chopping off their feet to get out of work

Both Kelley and Tarver said that there was no brutality on the farm

The student approached the car and handed the note to Hitler The chancellor laughed, shook his head a little, then signed the "excuse" for the youngsters

TODAY'S TALK

By GEORGE MATTHEW ADAMS

REASONS FOR HAPPINESS

HAPPINESS is perhaps the darling desire of the human race. Every struggle is toward its attainment. No one, however, ever has, or ever will, succeed in gaining it in terms of perfection. A measure of happiness, nevertheless, is the right of every individual.

The vision in a man's heart, and the will within his brain, usually measures the extent of his happiness. He who sees God and beauty in the simplest manifestation of nature, or human conduct, is well equipped to reap a rich harvest of happiness throughout his life.

One great reason for unhappiness, however, is that those who have so much of it, have no definite, decisive plan for attaining happiness. They form the habit of unhappiness, and build a barrier to happiness.

Happiness is courage, the will to do—the desire and determination to do, and to be somebody in a world that is all to mysterious, though by no means an "impossible world."

The very fact that there is so much in this world that is mysterious and confusing, is the great reason for every one of us to be brave in our acceptance and to go ahead mastering every situation that we can—for every time we do master a situation, happiness breaks out!

Happiness is so much a state of mind, of attitude toward one's surroundings and circumstances. I have known so many people who have been beset with physical pain, with deep trouble, and with staggering responsibilities—and yet who radiated happiness. And I have known those who had everything, seemingly, who radiated nothing but complaints and selfish questionings.

To be happy a man has to determine to be happy—and plan the way to its attainment!

People who think of their own pleasures and gains rarely are ever happy. You have to give away happiness in order to get it. Money must be put to work in order to do any good in the world—and so with happiness. It has to be given a job. Money carefully invested earns more money. Happiness sent out brings back happiness.

The happy people are the only truly rich people. They who have enriched others.

Indian Weapons and Lipsticks Unearthed in Ozark Foothills

Kansas City, Dec. 19—The site of an ancient stronghold of the Osage Indian nation, where weapons of the red man were made on a large scale and where young women used lipstick even as they do today, has been reported found in the Ozark foothills.

J. G. Braeklein, Kansas City architect and an authority on Indian mounds, made the discovery in Morgan county, twenty miles southeast of Sedalia.

"I believe that this is the site of a lost Indian workshop, a munitions factory that the Smithsonian institution has been searching for," Braecklein said after examining hundreds of stone axes, war clubs, tomahawks and arrowheads.

"I have been hunting for it for twenty years. The Smithsonian sent an archaeologist to Missouri to search for it and he came to me but I could not tell him anything. He knew there was some place, somewhere between the Missouri river and the Osage river, somewhere on the great Indian trail."

Braecklein expressed confidence that the site was that of a factory mentioned in legends 260 years ago at the time "Father Marquette came down the Mississippi river." He took the objects from a pocket.

"These two things belonged to some belle who lived on this town site—what shall I say, 500 or 5,000 or 50,000 years ago?" he said.

"I found them close together. This round stone with a hollow in it was the compact of the Indian maiden. She held it in her hand, just as I am holding it now, and this was her lipstick. This piece of hematite ore. She burned it in her camp fire and then, when she moistened it and rubbed it in this hollow, she had a red paste with which to paint her cheeks and lips. Why, a novelist doesn't need anything more than these articles from the toiletry of this long-vanished girl to construct a romance of love and war. Ah, yes, they were vain, those belles of so long ago just as ours are today."

A visit to a filling station lunch counter while motoring resulted in the find. Braecklein noted on the walls of the room numerous Indian relices.

Inquiring where they came from he was told "out east of here on Flat creek."

Braecklein investigated. The yield was rich. Clyde Nichols, farmer, learned one of his door steps was a discoidal stone with which the Indians played a game similar to ten pins. Many other relics were found in the Nichols pig lot.

WRAPPING TIME

It's a busy time at our house with the merry Christmas Day Swinging just around the corner and not quite a week away.
There's the sound of snipping scissors and a whispering overhead
And I know they're busy wrapping little gifts in paper red.
The house is full of mystery and magic, high and low,
And they're plainly up to something which they don't want me to know.

There's a hustle and a bustle and a scampering of feet
Every time I cross the doorway someone hastens to retreat.
There's whispering at the table which I'm not supposed to hear,
And they wink at one another every time that I draw near.
There's an air of great excitement,
so I think it safe to say Something nice is going to happen when I wake on Christmas Day.

They wisely look me over, up and down from head to toe,
So I've gathered the suspicion this old tie is doomed to go.
Though I wouldn't dare to say it lest their feelings should be hurt
I've the notion Christmas morning
I shall get another shirt.
Oh, I like the Christmas season, like to hear the church bells chime, Best of all I like the secrets of the busy wrapping time.

TO CHANGE DAIRY METHODS

Washington, Dec. 19 (AP)—Possible changes in present and future milk marketing agreements for cities were discussed Monday by J. H. Mason, new acting head of the dairy section of the agricultural adjustment administration as he took over his new duties. Mason said one change contemplated was the setting of prices to producers of milk only, instead of to both producers and distributors as provided for in agreements now in effect.

ASKS CUT IN WHISKEY TAX

Higher Levy Would Encourage Bootlegging, Says Pussyfoot Johnson.

Binghamton, N. Y., Dec. 19—William E. Johnson known as "Pussy-foot," said in an interview here that if repeal is to be a success, the total tax on whisky should not exceed 50 cents a gallon.

"Repeal is here, and we should make the most if it by keeping the bootleggers from trafficking in spirits," said the dry crusader. Mr. Johnson, who had just returned from a trip through the Middle West, said the legislative problem of liquor taxation is a serious one.

"Legislators," he added, "want a high tax for revenue purposes, and as low tax for protection against the bootlegging element.

"Before the Eighteenth Amendment, the tax on liquor was $1.10 a gallon and for twenty years before the eighteenth amendment an average of 1,500 illicit stills were seized annually by revenues. If $1.10 a gallon tax will not eliminate the bootlegger and illicit liquor manufacturer, how will $2.60 or $3.60 a gallon tax do it?

"It only takes about 40 cents to manufacture a gallon of whisky and a tax of more than 50 cents a gallon lets down the bars for bootleggers. Levy a tax $2.60 or $3.60 a gallon, which is about eight or nine times the cost of manufacture, and you have a more attractive proposition for bootleggers than you had under prohibition."

Destroy Rights Of Turkish "Harems"

Istanbul, Dec. 19 (AP).—Turkish women are witnessing the abolition of the last vestige of Turkish harems. The word harem means simply "a place reserved for women."

Until today "harems" continued to exist in all Istanbul trolley-cars. The first two seats were reserved for women. A man might sit there if no woman protested, but any woman who wished—and many did—could make a man scuttle to the back of the car.

Now the Istanbul city council decrees that the trolley "harems" must go, that men deserve equal rights with women to sit wherever they can find a seat.

A Chorus of Cheer

There are a great many things one can say about the glorious spirit of Christmas, but most of them have been said many times before.

The more we think about it, the more firmly we are convinced that the old, old greeting says it all, and says it well; we wish you all a Very Merry Christmas!
